

ROLL CALL: Boehner's Debt Limit Demand Faces Skepticism

Some Republican House Members said Wednesday that they were unconvinced that Speaker John Boehner can deliver on his demand Tuesday that any new debt ceiling hike be offset with spending cuts.

Speaker John Boehner's demand that any new debt ceiling hike be offset with spending cuts is already being met with grumbling from some in his Conference who believe the cuts promised in exchange for the last debt ceiling increase have not been realized.

And with Democrats openly questioning whether they can trust Boehner to negotiate in good faith — they accuse him of reneging on last year's Budget Control Act — it remains unclear who in the House could give the Ohio Republican the votes he needs to pass a deal to increase the debt limit...

Democratic Caucus Vice Chairman Xavier Becerra said the party's trust level is low with the GOP, indicating negotiations could be tough.

"I think it's difficult to trust the House Republican leadership when they have broken their own agreement and they have walked away from their commitments on more than one occasion," the California lawmaker said.
